Model history

The Aston Martin Cygnet was developed as a luxurious solution for urban mobility, built in Gaydon and delivered from 2011 to 2013. Technically based on the Toyota iQ, it was hand-finished by Aston Martin and received the brand's characteristic design details. This makes the Cygnet a unique blend of British luxury and city practicality.

Production numbers (rarity)

Exact figures vary by source, but all confirm its rarity:

- Some overviews mention approximately 600 cars built worldwide.
- Other sources specify a total around 786 (with approx. 272 RHD and 514 LHD).
- It's also reported that roughly 300 cars were actually sold/delivered, far fewer than the original annual plan.

What's certain: the Cygnet is very scarce and is becoming a prized curiosity within the brand.

(Fun fact: in 2018 Aston Martin built a single, unique V8-powered Cygnet—a showcase by the 'Q by Aston Martin' division—further underscoring how special the model is.)
