Alfa Romeo Montreal – Italian automotive art, restored with exceptional dedication

Few cars capture the creativity and boldness of the Italian automotive industry of the 1960s and 1970s quite like the Alfa Romeo Montreal.

Designed by Marcello Gandini during his time at Bertone, where he penned some of the most beautiful sports cars ever created, including the Lamborghini Miura, the Montreal has a personality entirely of its own. Its distinctive headlight covers, air vents behind the doors and striking proportions make it an unmistakable piece of automotive design.

Beneath the bonnet lies an equally fascinating piece of engineering. The 2.6-litre V8, featuring four overhead camshafts and mechanical SPICA fuel injection, has its roots in Alfa Romeo's racing heritage. With 200 hp, a wonderful soundtrack and a distinctive character, the Montreal offers a driving experience that few other classic grand tourers can match.

A restoration without compromise

This particular example, first registered on 15 September 1972, has been restored by its current Belgian owner with exceptional dedication and attention to detail.

The car was completely dismantled down to the very last nut and bolt. The bodywork was dry ice blasted, and every component was carefully assessed, rebuilt or replaced where necessary. The reassembly was entrusted to AMS in southern Germany, a specialist with extensive expertise in the Alfa Romeo Montreal.

For the mechanical SPICA fuel injection pump, the owner even travelled to Switzerland, where the specialist knowledge and experience required to correctly calibrate this remarkable injection system can still be found. This perfectly illustrates the philosophy behind the restoration: never choosing the easiest solution, but always the right one.

Attention was paid to even the smallest details. All chrome trim is complete, every dashboard instrument functions correctly, and the electric windows operate as they should.

Only 1,308 kilometres have been covered since the restoration, and the initial post-running-in service has already been carried out. The engine starts immediately and the car is in exceptional condition, both mechanically and cosmetically.

The car is accompanied by an extensive photographic dossier documenting the entire restoration process, supplemented by invoices.

For the discerning enthusiast

Buying an Alfa Romeo Montreal is one thing; finding an example whose complex mechanical components have been rebuilt with the appropriate expertise and care is quite another.

This particular Montreal offers the opportunity to enjoy one of the most fascinating Alfa Romeos ever built, without having to undertake the lengthy and costly process of a complete restoration yourself.

A remarkable piece of Italian automotive history, bringing together design, engineering and emotion in a truly beautiful way. A car that not only deserves a special place in any collection, but above all invites you to get behind the wheel and enjoy that wonderful Italian V8.
